Each year, the prestigious McDonald's All American Games feature the nation's best high school senior basketball players in the country. This year is no exception, as the top boys and girls prepare for Tuesday's showcase events in Houston.

In fact on Monday, ahead of the McDonald's All-American Game on Tuesday, James also sent a rather heartwarming message for Bronny. LeBron noted that he is "extremely proud" of his eldest kid before reminding him that his work is not done yet. The Lakers star, nonetheless, ensured his son that he'll be alongside him as he takes the next step in his journey.

Bronny James did not waste much time wowing the crowd in attendance, as he broke out a reverse two-handed throwdown off the bounce for his first dunk of the night. However, not all judges were impressed enough to give him a perfect score.

When the participants were announced on Monday afternoon, it was met with some surprise that Bronny James, the son of LeBron, would be showing off his athleticism in the Slam Dunk Contest. As for the 3-Point Contest, Andrej Stojakovic, the son of NBA All-Star Peja, headlined a list of boys' and girls' sharpshooters.

One of the marquee moments for high school hoops every year, McDonald's All American week puts all of the best boys' and girls' prospects under one roof to showcase their talent in front of a national audience.

McDonald's All American signee. The Pac-12 also has five All Americans: Oregon has two, while Colorado, Stanford and USC have one each. Duke the only ACC school on the list, has three McDonald's All Americans.

It's certainly another proud dad moment for James He has been supportive of his kids in their basketball careers, and he never shied away from hyping them up and guiding the two as they follow in his footsteps.

Of course, every dad, just like LeBron James, would give his kid a 10 on any dunk. In any case, Bronny's slam looked clean with a crispy execution. He probably should have been given a 10 across the board there, but slam dunk contest judges have their own personal criteria. You just don't know exactly what would make them raise that "10" card.
